

NDB are an up-and-coming band based in "Music City Nashville". The band punches above their weight class with a blend of classic and southern rock and their original songs. NDB writes, performs and produces their own music while collaborating across their varied talents. Their musicianship and skill surprises for their age while their music is a mix between indie rock and that classic rock feel of rhythm & blues.

The band was formed in January of 2017 on the back of an advert sent out by founding member and drummer Matt Skoda through the app Nextdoor. The band decided that the app and the name had a great back story, and today NDB are gigging all over Nashville.

Joined by founding member and lead guitarist Miles Morrow the band includes bassist Kai Foster, guitarist Kyle Harkins, lead singer Ethan Kress and recent addition Joseph Benedict on keys and backing vocals. NDB has built a solid following while beginning to deliver their own original music to their fans.

NDB won the Brentwood Battle of the Bands and opened for Rubiks Groove at the 3,000 person Eddie Arnold Amphitheater In 2019. More recently, they rocked the house at Nashville's Battle of the Bands at Rocketown, where they placed 2nd against nine other bands, all older than NDB.

NDB have a standing gig on Nashville's Broadway and have opened at venues across the city and the region as well as at summer festivals and local events.

The band released several singles on all streaming platforms to include their first original, "What Did I Do" written by guitarist Miles Morrow, performed by the band and recorded by drummer and producer, Matt Skoda. NDB are working on their first full length album which is expected to be released in Q2 of 2021.
